

CERTARA.AI

The client's research team receives countless reports from CROs and other partner organizations. Each includes valuable information that influences the development of their products.

Challenge: The client's reports create a significant silo. Each report is formatted differently. In many cases only 1-2 data points are relevant within reports that can be dozens of pages long. Getting to this data requires manual research which is a significant bottleneck to productivity.

Solution: Certara.AI enables a single point of entry for accessing reports from multiple sources. Relevant data is now searchable and extractable for primary datasets that the team relies on. With easily accessible data, the company's researchers improve productivity and decision making around developments as they relate to quality and product viability